HON. JOS. E. M'DONALD.

INDIANA'S FOREMOST STATES-MAN CROSSES THE RIVER.

Sketch of His Brilliant Career-The Many Offices of Honor and Trust He Filled in His Eventful Life.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 22.—Senator McDonald died at 11:35 last night. He passed away very peacefully without a struggle, surrounded by his family, who were all in attendance at his bedside.

Indiana has many distinguished sons who have rendered conspicuous service to the country. Not the least prominent of these was the Hon Joseph E. McDonald, whose name was often mentioned as the probable candidate of the Democratic party in presidential contests.

candidate of the Democratic party in presi-dontial contests.

Joseph Ewing McDonald was descended from Scotch and Huguenot parentage and was born in Butler county, Ohio, on the 29th of August, 1819. To the careful train-ing which he received in his youth from his mother Mr. McDonald was largely in-debted for his superior qualites. His father died when he was yet a small boy, and until he was twelve years of father died when he was yet a small boy, and until he was twelve years of age young McDonald spent his time on the farm receiving instructions from his mother. He early expressed a desire to study law, but it was thought advisable for him to learn a trade before committing himself to a professional career. Accordingly he was apprenticed to the firm of Androws & Nichol, saddlers and harness makers at Lafayette, Ind., for a term of six years, He applied himself with great diligence to the task of acquiring skill and efficiency in the craft with so much success that he was dismissed from his apprenticeship three the craft with so much success that he was dismissed from his apprenticeship three months before the legal expiration of the same. He was now eighteen years of age, and he resolved to prepare himself for a sphere of nobler action than was offered by the saddlery business, He entered Wabash college at Crawfordville, Ind., supporting himself by working as his trade night and morning and between terms. In 1840 he left this in stitution and entered the Asbury university at Greencastle, Ind., of which Bishop Simpson was the president. If reports are reliable young McDonald was a most exemplary student during his career in college, and ween he retired from the seat of learning at Greencastle was more than ordinar-

and ween he retired from the seat of learning at Greeneastle was more than ordinarily proficient in his studies. He began the regular study of law soon after leaving college, in the office of the late Zebulon Baird at Lafayette, Ind., who took a kindly interest in the young aspirant and devoted much time to instructing him in the principles of law. On his admission to the bar young McDonald had quite a profund knowledge of the practice and principles of law and was more than a match for many old practitioners. He was soon elected prosecutine attorney, in which capacity he was so successful as to be re-elected in 1845. During that year he removed to Crawfordsville where he built up a large and lucrative practice and built up a large and lucrative practice and achieved a position in the first rank at the bar of the state. In 1856 he was elected attorney general of Indiana and it is said that the position was never filled in a more satisfactory manner. Three years later he gemoved to Indianapolis and entered into partnership with Addison L. Roache, ex-judge of the supreme court. This connec-tion lasted until 1869, when Mr. Roache retired, and Mr. McDonald formed another partnership with the Hon. John M. Butler. They at once assumed a position among the easing firms of the state, and had a hand in some of the most important cases ever contested at the bar of Indiana. Mr. McDonald was ever a faithful and devoted ally of the Democratic party. In 1849 he was elected to the Thirty-first con-gress, but was defeated in his next candidacy. In 1864 he was nominated for gov-ernor, his opponent being the late Oliver P. Morton, but suffered defeat in the general Morton, but suffered defeat in the general Republican victory of that year, although he polled a much larger vote than the candidate of the last campaign preceding. The reorganization of the Democratic party in Indiana after the disastrous election of 1872, was largely due to Mr. McDouald's labor and sagacity. He was chosen chairman of the Democratic state central committee, and to him the success of the party in 1874 was largely attributable. He was elected United States senator in 1874 against strong opposition, due to his hard money theories. During the campaign he declared that he would not a word in his record on the financial question to be made a senator for life. He took his seat the campaign he declared that he would not all a word in his record on the financial question to be made a senator for life. He took his seat March 5, 1875, and retained it until 1881, making a most honorable record during his term of service. He has been three times married, his pusent wife being one of his placet hand me and accomplished latest in means.
